

Remedies For Unemployment Are Suggested by College Professor in Talk at Church

Remedies for the unemployment problem were suggested by E. W. Mounce, head of the department of commerce and business administration at the College, in an address Sunday night at the First Christian church. He recommends tax reform, abandonment of the present protectionist policy in favor of a tariff for revenue only, a better system of government employment agencies operating free of charge, a more general knowledge of the habits of the business cycle, better distribution of the national income through municipal ownership of public utilities, economic planning on at least a national scale, and wise expenditures on the part of wage-earners.

"Probably never before have so many men and women been without steady employment as there have been during the present business depression. And, the unemployment problem is not confined to the United States, but is world-wide in scope. The number of unemployed in the principal countries of Europe jumped from 4,762,557 in 1919 to 9,870,308 in 1931. We are probably relatively less affected by the depression than most of the other great industrial and commercial nations of the world.

20 Per Cent Jobless.
"Among organized workers almost 20 per cent of the membership is unemployed during periods of depression. It is estimated that 15 per cent of all wage-earners, or 2,000,000 workers, are continuously idle in normal times.

"The political as well as the economic and social consequence of unemployment are enormous. Just recently it played an important part in the dramatic change in the British government. In fact so serious are its consequences that men are led to question the very economic foundations of our present social order, and wonder if it is going to be able to prove itself capable of finding a solution for the problem.

Mr. Mounce pointed out that the current estimates of the American Federation of Labor placed unemployment in the United States for the month of July at 5,200,000, and emphasized the prediction of President William Green that 7,000,000 persons would be out of work this coming winter. Unemployment and wage cuts, from January until May of this year, Mr. Mounce showed, have cost labor four and a half billion dollars.

Three Classifications.
"There are three rather distinct types of involuntary unemployment, namely, seasonal, technological, and cyclical.

"Certain types of industries are called seasonal industries due to the fact that at certain times they are either doing but little business or are closed down entirely. There is an unequal distribution throughout the year either of the demand for the product of the enterprise or of the supply of raw material which it utilizes. The coal industry, the grain-growing industry, the ice industry and the tanning industry are examples of seasonal industries which give rise to seasonal unemployment. Workers in such industries are unable to find employment throughout the year. It is estimated for the country as a whole that one and a half million more workers are unemployed in the worst month of the year than in the best month. Efforts are being made to alleviate the seriousness of seasonal unemployment by combining certain types of businesses like the coal and the ice business. Manufacturers who produce articles demanded at other seasons of the year and thereby maintain steady employment for their labor force.

Machines and Prices.
"Technological unemployment has reference to that type of unemployment which has its origin in the invention of new machines and labor-saving devices. Such inventions, however, tend to cut the cost of production. Yet, in doing so they result in lowering wages and at least temporary throwing many workers out of employment. While new machines do temporarily throw men out of employment it is generally agreed that labor permanently benefits by the new labor-saving devices. When output per laborer is doubled costs are reduced per unit, therefore, the finished product will be sold for less. As the price falls the demand for the product will be greater. This will give rise to the need of new labor and will create new jobs. Consequently, many who were first displaced by the new device will find employment. Furthermore, since the public has saved on this article by lower price this means that they have more money left either to spend for other products or to save and invest. If they spend it for other things that creates new demands, and this in turn calls for more laborers. If they save it and deposit it in the banks then the banks will invest it in securities, which will enable some railroad to double-track its lines or a mining company to enlarge its scope of activities.

Traces Cycles.
"Speaking of cyclical unemployment,

A cold does 3 things "Pape's" stops them all

A cold always affects you in at least three ways. Air passages are inflamed and irritated. Perspiration is checked. Bowels are clogged with acid wastes from the mucous discharge. 'So doctors say you must do three things to be rid of a cold.

Pape's Cold Compound does all three! It reduces inflammation and swelling of the mucous membrane; it induces perspiration; opens the bowels. Chew one of these pleasant tablets and see how quickly nasal discharge stops; head clears; breathing becomes easy. See how that aching, feverish, weak feeling disappears. And "Pape's" doesn't stop with killing cold germs. It activates bowels and removes germs and acid wastes from the system. All drug stores—35c. ## Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the bowels close, perspiration is checked, food and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like Cascarel. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens lower muscles. You get cascared in the most pleasant form in candy Cascarels.

Remember this when you catch cold: whenever breath is bad, tongue coated, or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarels activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly and cost only a dime?

We sincerely thank you for your interest in the "Hidden Quart" Contest and for your entry. Almost all of you understood that the "hidden quart" of Conoco Germ Processed Oil stays up in the motor, where it clings to, penetrates and combines with metal surfaces—and never drains away. You appreciated the extra advantages of the "hidden quart" to the motorist. THE LORD HEARETH:—The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles.—Psalm 34:17.

TIME—THE WHITEWASHER
When Professor Herbert A. Miller remarked the other day that Sir Francis Drake was a pirate "who should have been hanged" he was not simply trying to make a startling comment that would land on the front pages. He was testifying to something that is self-evident, if you stop to think about it—the fact that the romance and glamorous which cluster about certain historical personages are usually put there chiefly by the passage of time.

Nothing looks quite the same at close range as it does a century or two later. In the days of Elizabeth, for example, there were plenty of people who felt precisely as Dr. Miller feels; the Spanish ambassador in London wore himself to a frazzle trying to project that viewpoint on to Elizabeth herself, and a great number of Englishmen were ready to agree.

But today Drake is something more than an English national hero. He is one of the great adventurers the race has produced, with a name that evokes dreams, and we envy the men who sailed with him around the world.

For time has a way of white-washing things and people; and that, very likely, is why we look back to the "good old days" and complain that our times are out of joint. If we could go back, to any bright epoch we might choose, we should gain very little.

We should find Drake, as Dr. Miller says, something very like an out-and-out pirate, and the same would be true of the others whom the romances love.

King Arthur's knights, if we could see them in the flesh, would very likely turn out to be a group of swaggering, uncouth roisterers from whom we would depart with relief. Christopher Columbus, greatest of admirals, quite clearly failed to impress very many of his associates with his splendid halo. The men who followed Cortez into Mexico would probably have said that it was a miserable job, sadly underpaid. Lee's army of northern Virginia—perhaps the most "romantic" group of soldiers ever seen—was really dreadfully ragged, frequently downright filthy, and in its off moments utterly unprepossessing to the casual observer.

WOMEN: watch your BOWELS

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients. When you're a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish, and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all drug stores keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

BRING THE HORSE BACK.

Cameron Sun
Return of the horse will help return of farm prosperity, The Sun contends. It will bring back a market for feed and enable the farmer again to produce both his motive power for work and what it consumes, instead of selling his product both to buy machinery and fuel for the machinery. Comparing the horse and the machine, the Kansas City Star says editorially:

"As between the horse and the machine, the horse has it. Certainly he has it so far as human sentiment goes. When the machine has it, the preference is based on utility alone, an economic consideration. Down at Archibald the other day Missouri farmers who still use horses tried to demonstrate that horses are more economical than tractors; at least for plowing. 'If these farmers are right about plowing, the horse should win over the machines in some other farm activity.'"

"What do these farmers say for their horses and their mules (for mules also made demonstrations, and furthermore horses always include mules in the general classification in Missouri)? The farmers said that in extensive plowing the 4-horse, 6-horse and 8-horse team could do as much as or more than a tractor by way of pulling a multiple plow. The more horses, the less machinery to care for, to keep in repair and to replace. A farmer who handles his horses intelligently finds that he does not need to buy replacements; the animals replace themselves and often produce a surplus for the horse market. Also the horses provide an outlet for some of the farm's products; a factor especially to be considered at a time when farm surplus is a problem. In some measure produced by the advent of farm machinery."

"But what the horse-owning farmer did not urge on the witnesses of the demonstration is that the horse is an almost indispensable companion in farm life. He has made agriculture. He has grown up with farm families. He has been the servant, the pal and the pet of not only boys and girls, but of parents as well. He has earned and enjoyed the affection we yield to animals that come to understand us and are faithful to us."

"A farm without horses is like an orchard without birds, a habitation without children. If the machine has displaced the horse without due process of justice, we hope to some extent, at least, he may be restored to his happy place."

Doorn, Holland.—The machine age has overtaken Willam Holienzoller. An electric saw has supplanted the axe with which he was wont to take exercise. All the superfluous trees on this estate have been chopped down and now wood is imported from outside. This he cuts to stove size with the new saw.

London.—A coroner's jury has decided that the Rev. F. W. C. Woollett, vicar of Leesfield, was "possessed of an evil spirit, had lost his faith in God and had laid a curse upon his wife and children." He was found asphyxiated in the vicarage.

New York.—The mayor was late and missed a television appointment altogether. Wrong! It was not James J. Walker. It was Mayor Anthony J. Carmine of Chicago, who was in town visiting Mr. Walker.

Chicago.—John F. Barrett, grain broker, is telling his friends, "I told you so." In September he predicted there would be no killing frost before November. He offered to wager money but there were no takers. Mr. Barrett has quite a reputation as an amateur weather forecaster. There was a light frost.

Gems of Peril

by HAZEL ROSS HAILEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Old Mrs. Jupiter, wife of the millionaire automobile manufacturer, gives an engagement dinner and dance for her secretary and protegee, MARY HARKNESS, who is to marry DIRK RUTHER, son of a blue-blooded family.

Mary receives a telephone call from her scapegrace brother, EDDIE, saying he is in trouble and must see her. The house is strictly guarded against "gate-crashers" because Mrs. Jupiter is wearing the famous Jupiter rubies. Mary arranges for Eddie to be admitted secretly. When she goes upstairs to meet him she hears screams and then shots in Mrs. Jupiter's room. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 2

Fearfully, as if drawn by a magnet, Mary moved slowly forward. Outside the closed door of Mrs. Jupiter's sitting room she stopped and called sharply, experimentally, "Eddie?" Then more loudly, "Eddie!" There was no response. Could it be Eddie in there? What would he be doing in Mrs. Jupiter's room? He had no business in there unless the servants had directed him there in error, or had gone in there by mistake.

He hadn't said anything about bringing someone with him, though, and some other person was in there—the person he had been quarrelling with. Suddenly she remembered, and the realization stunned her. Mrs. Jupiter was in that room. Hadn't she gone upstairs to take her shoes off? It had been Mrs. Jupiter's voice she heard. Then whose—oh, dear God—whose hand had fired those shots?

Perhaps there hadn't been any. Her unbelieving mind was mulling about it. Perhaps an automobile had backed in the drive. But that was nonsense—"the noise" had been close, plain. You couldn't hear noise from the outside clearly in here, in his great, heavy-walled house with the thickly shuttered windows.

The silence began to tear at her nerves. Gasping with excitement she reached out suddenly and jerked open the door. The room was brightly lighted but empty. She looked about dumbfounded, almost ready to believe that her senses had tricked her. Then she looked down—and there on the floor lay the crumpled figure of Mrs. Jupiter, the white hair awry where the diamond head dress had been ruthlessly snatched from it, the gold dress twisted about her knees, her poor old wrinkled face haggard, and strangely peaceful under the searching glare of the lights. An old pair of felt house slippers covered her feet.

Her hands, barren now of rings, still clutched something which she held fastidiously between the palms, still firmly grasped together on her breast. It was the ruby necklace.

But it was the spot in her forehead just below the hairline, from which a low ooze of blood trickled and ran down the temple, into the snow white hair, that drew Mary's horrified gaze.

Her distended eyes took in the whole scene with photographic clarity before she realized its enormity. For the first time it occurred to her, as she stared at the still, disheveled figure, that Mrs. Jupiter was dead.

What had happened seemed quite clear—Mrs. Jupiter had been robbed, but she had not given up the necklace. With her last breath she had protected it; the coil of blood red stones between her fingers testified to her success. The thief had not been able to get it away from her, but she balked and had cost her life.

A scream broke from the girl's lips and without looking where she was going she backed away from the figure on the floor and stumbled through the first door that presented itself, the door into Mrs. Jupiter's bedroom. She closed the door and leaned against it, hating, her knees nearly giving under her. She tried to collect her thoughts. Suppose it had been money, then, that Eddie needed—

She ran from room to room, stumbling in her haste, opening doors, calling there was no sign of disturbance in the other rooms. Her own door was open. If Eddie had been there he had one. She stood in the hall looking down one blank door to another, calling ling softly, "Eddie, Eddie, it's me, Mary! Oh, Eddie-boy, dear, where are you?" The silence seemed unnatural. She broke into helpless sobs.

October 30, but the weather bureau said it was not of killing severity.

Suddenly it came to her that what she had been thinking was simply fantastic. Eddie had had nothing to do with this. More than likely the poor boy had not even come yet. Something had happened to delay him. She looked at her wrist watch. 20 minutes had elapsed since his telephone call. She ran downstairs in feverish haste.

At the foot of the stairs she collided with Spence, who was just coming up. She grabbed him by the shoulders and held on while she tried to get control of her voice.

"Oh, Spence, Spence! Go up to Mrs. Jupiter's room, quickly. Something's happened. She's hurt! I think she's dead!"

The old servant held her off sternly, inspecting her reproachfully. "You're excited and overwrought, Miss Mary. And no wonder, with all that's going on hereabouts tonight. A man can't bear his own thoughts," he added tartly, as an extemporaneous tap dancing contest broke out behind them in the ballroom, "let alone knowing what he'll find when he turns a corner unexpected."

His thin nostrils quivered with disdain as his upturned gaze picked out the white blur of a girl's frock encircled by the black-clad arms of her escort, half hidden in the turn of the stair.

"I tell you it's true," Mary insisted. "I heard them, and I've seen her. Her rings are gone, and the talaria, and her forehead—oh, you'll see it if you'll just go on up!"

"Well, well, we'll see," he replied, testily, starting forward with obvious reluctance. "Indeed, I was just going up anyhow to answer Mrs. Jupiter's bell."

"Bell?"

"Mrs. Jupiter rang for me, Miss Mary, not two minutes ago. And would she be doing that if she were killed?"

With a reproachful lift of the eyebrows he ascended. Mary, watching the matter-of-fact back move upward so serenely, almost decided that she must be mistaken. Murders and such don't happen where I am, that respectable back seemed to say.

What she wanted now was to find Bessie, but Bessie proved hard to find. Fracked to earth in the butler's pantry, munching maroons and stuffed olives with blithe impartiality, Bessie slipped down off the high stool she was perched on and confronted Mary sullenly.

Mary's white face and burning eyes and the quiet, precise manner of her question puzzled her. Scouting reproach, she took quick affront, after the manner of her kind.

"And how would I know who carried it?" she retorted, pettily. "I suppose I've had nothing to do but listen for the doorbell with all this racket going on?"

Bessie was obviously cut out for the life of the party, and her sulking was not unnatural. Relief surged up in Mary's heart.

"Then you didn't let anybody in?" "They let themselves in if they came," the maid snapped. "I'd no time to be bouncing in and out of there. I went and unlocked the side door when you told me, Miss, and left it open. If they came they got in all right."

Mary drew a long breath. "Thank you, Bessie."

It was not Bessie's fault. It was her own, if it was anybody's. The side door was standing open as she passed. Nearly half an hour. Anybody might have come in and gone out. Could it be possible? A half crazed boy and the sight of all those jewels—

But she would have waited. She had never failed to get him out of any of his crapes before.

Mary closed the door and locked it gain.

It seemed hours before Spence came down, and when he did he seemed to have forgotten that she lived. He seemed surprised that she was still standing in the same spot where he had left her.

"Well, what are you standing there for?" he barked as if she had been one of the servants. "Find the Master quick! And Barclay!" He snapped his fingers, and the second man came trotting past haste.

"Go right across the street and fetch Dr. Jordan, and take him up to the mistress' room as fast as you can."

It was impossible not to obey the old man as he cracked out commands like a drill sergeant. Mary moved off but stopped to telephone Eddie. He shared a flat with two or three other young men, and because of them she had never visited him. His telephone number was the only definite link she had with him.

Someone answered but it was not Eddie. Eddie was not there. He had not been for three or four days.

"I know something is the matter," she told him—she was sure he was lying—"but I'm his sister. He called me about half an hour ago. It's very important. Don't you know where he is?"

It was quite hopeless. The boys were as worried as she was. Eddie seemed to have disappeared.

Mary put up the receiver slowly. She wanted to go somewhere and think, but she did not like to leave the telephone. Eddie might call again at any minute, and she wanted to be there.

This figure of Teddy Doulton lurched into the hallway. Teddy, always pretended to be drunker than he was. It was part of his "line." He fancied himself as a comedian. Now he hailed her with shouts of delight.

"We thought you'd eloped," he chorled gaily. "Where's Dirk?" His puzzled gaze searched the dark corner in vain. Anything to get rid of him, Mary thought desperately.

"Listen, Ted," she said quickly, "will you do something for me?" He was compliant but suspicious. "Then go out and find your host for me. He may be out in the drive talking to the chauffeurs. Find him and bring him here, quick!"

Teddy saluted elaborately. "I hear and obey." He turned him a self around and started off, but suddenly clapped a hand to his head. "By the way, who is my host?" Then he snapped his fingers. "Ah, I remember now. Don't go 'way, sweetheart, I'll be right back!"

He moved off, making exaggerated notions of search; lifting cushions, spawking draperies, and inspecting woodwork through a non-existent magnifying glass. She had not really expected any help from the fool but his silliness seemed more than she could bear.

Suddenly she wanted Dirk terribly. He would know what to do. The ballroom was deserted as she crossed it and a babble of voices from the dining room told that supper was being served. Dirk and Cornelia were not there. She went out on the terrace. Some dark corner would yield them, she felt sure. As she came out on the walk that led to the lower garden, the sound of voices below her arrested her attention.

Two figures were swaying together on the very lip of the lily-pool; the woman's white dress brightly silhouetted against the dark.

"I will! I will, too!" she was sobbing. "Let go of me, you brute!"

It was Cornelia, and the man whose bosom she was pounding with her fists as he held her firmly by the shoulders, was Dirk.

Pituitary Gland Gets Blame For Baldheadedness

Chicago, Nov. 3.—If your head looks more like a billiard ball than a hairdresser's ad, it may only be a sign that your anterior pituitary gland is off its feed.

The University of Illinois Research and Educational Hospital let it be known yesterday that it is continuing experiments started by Dr. E. Norman Bengtson of Maywood, Ill., on what causes baldheadedness.

Until now, it was believed by medical authorities that baldness was caused by defective thyroid gland functioning. Dr. Bengtson accidentally discovered, one day, that a new growth of hair was growing on the head of a woman to whom he was giving glandular extracts in treatment of her tendency to overweight.

After experimenting for a period, he turned it over to the University for extensive tests, and fifty subjects have been selected and are undergoing complete physical examinations preliminary to a careful test of the glandular treatment.

Dr. Bengtson considers that the anterior pituitary gland at the base of the brain regulates the growth of hair. One of his subjects, his records show, was a man of 58; bald for two years, who developed a complete head of gray hair which eventually turned black after several months treatment.

Physicians warned, however, that the effectiveness of the pituitary extract remains to be proven.

20 Looking Back Twenty Years

The colors for the corn growing and domestic science contests to be held the last of this week are green, yellow and white, and every merchant is urged to decorate their store windows for the event.

The "elder bug" has certainly struck Hopkins and the mill of W. E. White is kept busy manufacturing this popular beverage. As many as twenty-five teams are frequently seen in line waiting their turn to reach the mill, and now many are coming with their apples the night before in order to be first in line the following morning. The capacity of the mill is 2,000 gallons a day, and as it has been in operation for thirty days, it means an output of sixty thousand gallons, or about three gallons for every man, woman and child in Nodaway county.

Work was commenced last week on the new bridge for the Wabash on the state road east of Maryville. The bridge is to be a concrete one. The Wabash track is to be lowered about two feet on the grade coming to Maryville, and on this account the road leading under the bridge is to be cut down two feet. The bridge will have an opening of twenty feet for passers.

COMFORT for COLICKY BABIES

... THROUGH CASTORIA'S GENTLE REGULATION

The best way to prevent colic, doctors say, is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste. But remember this: a tiny baby's tender little organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. This is just the time Castoria can help most. Castoria, you know, is made specially for babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. For years it has helped mothers through trying times with colicky babies and children suffering with digestive upsets, colds and fever. Keep genuine Castoria on hand, with the name:

equitable distribution of national wealth and income.

Methods Suggested.

Since this is not always possible, Mr. Mounice suggests other methods.

"In the first place, much could be accomplished through tax reform. The government by changing its tax basis can shift the burden of taxation from the shoulders of the poor and those least able to bear it to the shoulders of the rich and those most able to carry it. After all the only feasible way of taxing the people is upon their ability to pay.

"In the second place, we should gradually abandon our present protectionist policy and go on the basis of a tariff for revenue only. The protective tariff is economically unsound, and is so considered by the leading economists everywhere. It is class legislation. It protects the class that needs no protection. What the tariff really does is to redirect capital and labor from more profitable to less profitable fields of industry.

"In the third place, a better system of government employment agencies operating free of charge would place purchasing power in the hands of millions of our labor population, not only by saving exorbitant commissions, but also by eliminating loss of time.

"A fourth proposal is that efforts be made to bring about a more general knowledge of the habits of the business cycle. Business men should make a careful study of it and become better acquainted with its various characteristics. To anticipate the cycle will result in neutralizing it at least to a measurable degree.

Favors Public Ownership.

"A fifth suggestion is that much could be accomplished toward a better distribution of the national income through municipal ownership of public utilities. Money saved to the consuming public through lower light, gas, and water rates may either be saved or else used for the purchase of other things. The success of municipal ownernship largely depends upon the state of local politics.

"A sixth suggestion is economic planning on at least a national scale. It is quite correctly charged that the failure to plan national production inevitably leads to maladjustment of industry.

"Finally, wage-earners themselves could do much to relieve the stress of cyclical unemployment by the exercising of wisdom and frugality in their expenditures during prosperity periods. It is true that many laborers do not receive a large enough return during such periods to save much. Yet a much greater saving could be accomplished by a disciplined effort on the part of the laborer.

"In conclusion, it should be observed that the unemployment problem is not alone a problem of the man who toils. It is definitely and vitally concerns the capitalist class as well. It is fundamentally a product of capitalism and it stands as a severe challenge to it. Both capital and labor must cooperate in reducing the quantity of unemployment to a minimum. Capital cannot afford to take cognizance of the problem, for in order to perpetuate its own position and our modern economic system it must not fail to do its utmost to find a solution. It is just as important to capital as it is to labor."

L. L. Livengood, recently elected commander of the James Edward Gray Post of the American Legion has called a special meeting to be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at his office in the Mithau building.

MARKETS

Profit Taking Is Cause of Decline in Wheat Prices

Chicago, Nov. 3.—(AP)—For the first time in a two-sided market developed in wheat today, and price swings went suddenly backward after surpassing top price records established only 24 hours before. Rallies were numerous, but minus the sustained vigor that previously appeared to have almost no limit. The action of the market was in line with opinions generally expressed by trade experts that a reaction from the recent extraordinary advance was overdue.

Wheat closed unsettled ¼c to 1½c under yesterday's finish. Corn, varying from ¾c decline to ¼c gain, oats ¼c to ¾c down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2 cents.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—(P)—Grains rose afresh early today after an irregular start with trading on a big scale. Liverpool reported lack of wheat, offerings either from Russia or other countries. New bid advances were in the face of reiterated official denials of assertions that Russia had withdrawn from the world market as an exporter. Opening at ¼c off to ¼c up, wheat rose quickly 1 cent a bushel. Corn started ¼c to ½c up and afterward held near the initial limits.

Outgoing once more the season's previous top quotations, wheat soon climbed to 20c above where the rise started on Oct. 5. For at least the time being, official denials that Russia would no longer be an exporter counted for little as against advice that the Liverpool market was excited because actually wheat offerings from Russia continued to be suspended, and also because North America and Argentina as well had made no new tenders of supplies. A further incentive to speculative buying was widespread notice of reports that a nationally known trader was actively promoting the upward swings of the market.

Extremely heavy selling of wheat however, developed on the new advances and a violent reaction ensued to above a cent under yesterday's close, off more than 2 cents from today's early top. Accompanying the price setbacks were indications that little or no wheat export business from North America had been put through overnight. Besides, late quotations from Liverpool were also less bullish. Corn and oats kept within relatively narrow limits, but fluctuated with wheat.

Provisions rose and fell with grain.

Trader Credited With Wheat Coup Stays Optimistic

Arthur Cutten Is Unworried by Halt in Recent Price Advance.

Foreign Crop Damaged

Millions of Bushels of French and German Wheat Is Sprouting in Shocks, Dispatches Relate.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—(P)—Arthur W. Cutten, a small, quiet man who deals in grain in a big way, sat in a corner of a LaSalle street broker's office today watching the blackboard figures on wheat fluctuate after a 20 cent rise in less than a month.

Was it true that he engineered the recent bull market and had made millions in it? Tilted back in his chair, his feet on a table, Cutten hardly took his eyes off the blackboard as he smiled and said slowly, "You know, the way the market is now, I cannot be quoted or make any comment."

What did he think of the market, now that the long anticipated reaction had forced prices back down a cent or two.

He was "optimistic," Cutten said. Back in August this man who deals in millions was believed to have entered the wheat market as a persistent buyer. He was said to have told his associates "wheat and corn are too cheap, dirt cheap."

Since then has come a slow steady rise. Wheat that sold around 48 cents early in October sold around 68 cents today and rumor had it that large blocks of that wheat belonged to Cutten, one of the heaviest traders in the country.

PROFIT TAKING HALTS ADVANCE

Chicago, Nov. 3.—(P)—The profit-taking was more than the wheat market could withstand today and futures suffered the greatest setback since the current rise started Oct. 5.

Early in the session, all of the deferred deliveries gained. But the inclination to realize on the tremendous profits made in the last few days soon broke the market.

Reports that Russia would not export wheat this year or next, a considerable factor in yesterday's bull market, were denied.

In Minneapolis No. 1 Amber Durum wheat sold in the cash market at $1 a bushel for the first time in 18 months.

The market closed unsettled, at from 1/4 to 1/2 cents under yesterday's final figures. December closed at 62-5/8 and May at 66-3/4. Corn was independent, closing at from 1/2 cent loss to 1/4 cent gain.

Kansas City—Wheat futures prices, on the rise for more than a month, made further substantial gains here this morning. The December price advanced 1 cent to 57 cents in early trading and May was up 2 cents to 62 cents here.

HORSE BITES INFANT

Chicago, Nov. 3.—(P)—While Charles Browning, 22 months old, sat in his baby buggy which his mother left on a sidewalk while she went into a grocery, a horse hitched to a dairy wagon, bent down and bit off the little finger of the child's right hand. It happened, yesterday in the Wilson Avenue district.

U. S. Deficit Mounts

Government Goes 661 Million in Red in 4 Months.

Washington, Nov. 3.—(P)—The government completed the first four months of the current fiscal year with a deficit of $661,120,850.

From July 1 to October 31 the government income from all sources amounted to $703,628,673. Expenditures were $1,364,750,523.

A year ago the government piled up a deficit of $171,514,328 in the first four months and finished the fiscal year with a deficit of $903,000,000.

The chief cause of the decrease in income this year was the drop of $245,000,000 in income tax collections.

That tax has returned $539,121,623 this year as compared with $582,262,664. Miscellaneous internal revenue produced only $189,661,371 as compared with $206,409,195.

General expenditures showed an increase of more than $200,000,000, amounting to $993,732,174 as against $793,364,320.

The farm board has spent $99,363,477 in the one-third year as compared with $24,665,484.

The postal deficiency also has increased, jumping from $40,004,592 to $65,000,000.

Jumble-Lations

A lady, in attempting to drive her car in the garage, accidentally permitted one of the fenders to brush the door, and was startled to see a portion of the door fall off. . . . Knowing that her husband would take full advantage of this incident to question her skill as a driver, she hurried around and got a carpenter to repair the damage. . . . The carpenter did such a good job that only a close examination would show that the door had ever been broken. . . . The lady was therefore surprised and chagrined when her husband said suddenly that evening, "Well, I see you had the garage door fixed." . . . Not knowing what to say the lady decided to say nothing, and was glad she had been so prudent when her husband continued, "I meant to have that door fixed yesterday. Some way or other I happened to break it when I was parking the car for the night, and so I just stuck the loose piece back in place until I could find a carpenter. How did you happen to notice it?" . . . "Oh, his wife replied airily, "I was out there this morning and noticed you had broken the door, and thought it ought to be fixed at once. . . . Men drivers are so careless," she added.

Ambulance Driver Killed in Accident Was From Hopkins

Ray E. Freeman, Killed in Kansas City, Will Be Buried in County.

Ray E. Freeman, age 25 years, who was killed early Monday morning in Kansas City when driving an ambulance for the General Hospital there, formerly lived in Hopkins. Funeral services will be held at 7 o'clock Wednesday night at the O. V. Mast chapel in Kansas City and the body will be brought to Hopkins where services will be held at the Hopkins cemetery at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Madge Freeman, one son, Ray E. Freeman, Jr., one daughter, Barbara Jean, of the home, 5936 Brooklyn avenue, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Freeman, 4000 Brooklyn avenue, Kansas City, formerly of Hopkins.

Freeman was injured fatally when his machine overturned after striking another motor car at Third-first street and the Paseo. He was answering an emergency call which later was cancelled by the police.

Dr. Rollin Smith, riding with Freeman, suffered a probable fractured skull, a fractured jaw, severe injuries to his chest and abrasions and bruises to his body and face. Unless complications set in, he is expected to recover.

It was shortly before 2 o'clock Monday morning when the police telephone rang in the receiving ward at the hospital. A motor car accident was reported at Fortieth and the Paseo. It was believed the car there had "turned over several times" and several persons had been injured.

Just before Freeman started, Alex Costello, another ambulance driver, and Dr. Ernest Glascock, interne, had answered a call to Linwood and Benton boulevards.

They had returned with a patient just as Freeman and Dr. Smith left on their call. Costello attempted to "flag down" Freeman.

"I would have made that call," Costello said, "I tried to wave Ray down, but he apparently did not see nor hear me. I didn't want him to make the call, because he was second out, and being first, I thought I should make it."

Freeman had made several calls Monday night previous to the one on which he died.

Cecil Willis, 25 years old, 2518 East Thirty-first street, whose car Freeman's ambulance struck, was arrested following the accident and taken to the Flora avenue police station. He was to be taken to the coroner's office today.

Freeman leaves his widow and two children, and also was supporting his father, who has been out of work, Freeman had been an ambulance driver four years.

Committee Will Begin Navy League Inquiry Thursday

Board Named by President Is Expected to Name Ex-Admiral Chairman.

Will Formulate Reply

Group Is Told to Investigate "Assertions of Fact" Made by William H. Gardner.

Washington, Nov. 3.—(P)—The committee of five named by President Hoover to investigate criticisms of his naval policy probably will meet for the first time here Thursday.

It will then decide on the course to take in disproving the accusations made by William Howard Gardner, head of the navy league, against the President's naval policy.

Present indications point to Admiral Hugh Rodman, retired, as the choice for chairman, with John Hays Hammond an alternative possibility. The latter could not be found today, but the rest of the committee believed they could get him here by Thursday.

If this plan is carried out the Hoover committee will be meeting simultaneously with the executive board of the navy league which is to decide what stand the organization will take in the quarrel between its own president and the chief executive of the nation.

Will Publish Reply. Sentiment of the four members of the Hoover committee now in the city points to a session at which the available information would be gathered from government sources to answer each specific charge made by Gardner in the statement that termed Mr. Hoover "abysmally ignorant" of the needs of a navy.

A reply would then be formulated and published. This course would avoid the process of examining witnesses and cluttering a record with opinions and discussion.

So swiftly did the president act, after receiving a membership list of the navy league late yesterday, that not until today could the chosen committee lay plans for placing on trial disputed statements by William H. Gardner, president of the league.

A Limited Investigation. The five men named are Assistant Secretary Jahncke of the navy; John Hays Hammond, retired mining engineer, and Eliot Wadsworth, of the president's emergency relief committee, all of whom were listed as members of the navy league. The two non-league members are Undersecretary Castle of the state department and Admiral Hugh Rodman, retired.

Their inquiry, a statement from the White House said, must be "solely into the assertions of fact" made by Gardner, and not into his "opinions or conclusions."

Merle E. Sealeman Stops Here En Route From Coast to N. Y.

Merle E. ("Slats") Sealeman, who hails from New York now, is stopping here enroute home from the Pacific coast, where he has been attending Pacific Coast Trust conference. Since he left the Teachers' College, where he was the first director of information, Mr. Sealeman has been assistant secretary of the American Banker's Association.

When asked what he had observed of business conditions over the country and if he could notice any appreciable pick-up, Mr. Sealeman answered with the following story:

"Two business men were having a dinner conference at a hotel in San Francisco, and one asked the other if he thought there would soon be an improvement in business conditions. 'To which the other replied: 'That man waiting on us knows just as much about it as anyone.'"

Mr. Sealeman was attending conference at Los Angeles and San Francisco, and had box seats to one of the big football games there, but because of a four days' illness had to listen in on the radio.

Conquering Lion of Judah Observes First Anniversary

Addis Ababa Abyssinia, Nov. 3.—(P)—Emperor Haile Selassie, king of kings and conquering lion of Judah, celebrated today the first anniversary of his coronation as ruler of Abyssinia, the last independent empire in Africa.

With the coming of the sun the garison boomed out a thundering salute. The black-bearded descendant of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba attended stately religious services with his buxom queen and their numerous children at St. George's Cathedral where his regal robes, imperial crown and sceptre were displayed.

He rode in triumph through streets crowded with his subjects, using the golden state coach which he bought from the former Emperor William of Germany for $10,000.

At the head of the royal procession walked dignitaries of the catholic church chanting the Ethiopian ritual in the native Amharic tongue. Foreign diplomats in their conventional European dress contrasted strangely with the thousands of Abyssinian tribesmen wearing lion's skins, head dresses of lion manes and carrying rhinoceros hide shields and sinister weapons.

Afterward a banquet of raw meat was spread in the open for the 10,000 braves.

In the evening there was a lavish banquet for the foreign officials and a spectacular display of American fireworks.

New Members of Parliament Wait Hours For Seats

First Session Today Is Merely to Elect a Speaker.

London, Nov. 3.—(P)—A drowsy vanguard of victors, somewhat the worse for "cramming" in the Parliament library during the night was the first evidence that a new regime took hold in Britain today with the opening of the new parliament elected last week.

The first comers appeared before midnight last night, although they had more than twelve hours to wait for the doors to open, and prepared to catch what sleep they could in the library in order to be first in the rush for seats when the doors opened. Prime Minister MacDonald will leave London tonight for his home at Lossiemouth for a few days rest. There he will prepare for the real beginning of the new session a week from today.

Today's session is held merely to elect a speaker, and this is done with a pageantry that pantomimes the proverbial politician's modest gesture of the office seeking the man.

The seeking is done by the pointing finger of the bewigged chief clerk of the house who, amid complete silence, rises from his seat and aims a digit at Sir George Courthope, conservative, who had sat in the Commons for a quarter of a century. Sir George's cue is to nominate—in this case Edward Algeron Fitzroy, speaker of the last parliament.

The clerk rises again and points at Will Thorne, Labor member, who seconds Fitzroy's nomination.

Sir George and Mr. Thorne then seek out the new speaker among the benches and drag him, struggling and protesting, to the rostrum. His "struggle" is to show that he considers himself unworthy of the honor thrust upon him. Encouraged by reassuring exclamations from members, however, he finally allows his "reluctance" to be overcome.

County-Wide Hog Meeting Will Be Held on Friday

A county-wide hog meeting will be held in the Extension Office starting at 11 o'clock on Friday morning.

The meeting will be in the form of a school to give information relative to feeding hogs and other questions which hog raisers may want to ask. It is the purpose of the meeting to help farmers with pork production problems.

The program will include a discussion of the hog outlook and what to do about it. Some interesting local data will be given on this subject.

Brood sow management will be emphasized by H. M. Garlock of the Missouri College of Agriculture. The discussion will take up rationing, care of sows at farrowing, and swine sanitation.

Gran Goodson, of the St. Joseph Stock Yards Company, will discuss the type of hog that the market wants. A local veterinarian will discuss swine diseases.

Leland Smith arrived in Maryville recently for a visit with friends and relatives.

Kryl's Band Will Give 2 Concerts Here This Month

Chamber of Commerce Arranges to Bring Famous Organization.

A Gesture of Goodwill

Low Admissions are Promised—Band Has Fine Reputation Throughout Country—Has Played Here Before.

The announcement is made today by the Maryville Chamber of Commerce that Kryl's famous band has been secured for two performances at the college auditorium, Saturday, November 21.

Kryl and his band are known to Maryville as they have played here several times before. The Chamber of Commerce was fortunate in getting a stop-over date to hear the musical organization as they play in Omaha Sunday the 22nd.

A matinee appealing particularly to school children and a regular evening performance will be presented. The admission prices will be announced at a later date. However, the admissions will be well under the usual prices paid to hear this popular musical organization as it is not a money-making venture on the part of the local Chamber of Commerce but a goodwill activity affording the people in this territory an opportunity of hearing an internationally known band.

A Talented Organization. The Kryl Band is the result of many years of effort, of unceasing watchfulness to secure the best musicians in the world, of constant and tedious rehearsing, of tireless effort on the part of Kryl himself and by the determination of each individual member of the organization to give the best that is in him.

Each player is selected with as much care and consideration as are the several soloists who accompany the band, and every man must pass a rigid examination by Kryl himself, before he is accepted as a member of the band.

Has Unique Reputation. Kryl and his Band have a unique reputation throughout the whole country. No organization has a higher reputation for the rendition of the great standards in music, and the name of Kryl has come to be synonymous with the best there is in the domain of high art.

The services of the band are in constant demand, in fact, its principal work being the giving of Festival celebrations in the larger cities of the country.
